A Multiple-representation Paradigm for Document

Development Pehong Chen,1988 Powerful personal workstations with high resolution displays pointing devices and windowing environments have created many new possibilities in presenting information accessing data and efficient computing in general In the context of document preparation this workstation based technology has made it possible for the user to directly manipulate a document in its final form The central idea is that a document is immediately reprocessed as it is edited no syntactic constructs are explicitly used to express teh desired operations This so called direct manipulation approach differs substantially from the traditional source language model in which document semantics structures and appearances are specified with interspersed markup comands In the source language model a document is first prepared with a text editor its formatting and other related processors are then executed usually in batch mode and the result is obtained A complete document development process involves a number of subtasks ranging from authoring reading filing to printing There are certain aspects of document development that are best suited to a source language approach while others are easier Proceedings of the First European Conference on TEX for Scientific Documentation, 16-17 May 1985, Como, Italy Dario Lucarella,1985 ACM SIGPLAN Notices ,1993 The Second ACM SIGPLAN History of Programming Languages Conference (HOPL-II), April 20-23, 1993, Cambridge, Massachusetts, USA ,1993 Encyclopedia of Computer Science and Engineering Anthony Ralston,Edwin D.
