Minimum energy (in eV) needed to be ionizing - Answers-15eV

Why is rhenium mixed with tungsten in a filament? - Answers-Prevent cracking with repeated heating/cooling

K edge of Iodine - Answers-33.2 keV

K shell binding energy of tungsten - Answers-69.5 keV

Max energy of the xray that is created at the anode - Answers-Can't be higher than the energy of the electron that created it (which maxes at the voltage between the cathode and anode in kV)

K-shell binding energy proportional to... - Answers- $Z^2$

Auger electron - Answers-Inner shell electron gets ionized, another drops down, emits energy but this energy ionizes another (outer shell) electron. No x-rays produced

What elements tend to make Auger electrons? - Answers-Lower Z. This is also why you pick high Z for anodes

Relationship between Z and amount of Bremsstrahlung - Answers-Directly proportional

Type of shielding to use when blocking beta emitters (like a syringe full of  $^{90}\text{Y}$ ) - Answers-Low Z shield (like plastic) because high Z shield will create tons of Bremsstrahlung xrays

Double the mA - Answers-Double the intensity of the energy spectrum

Increase kVP by 15% - Answers-Double intensity of energy spectrum

Average energy of the xrays is based on the... - Answers-kVP, unrelated to mA

Average energy relative to kVP - Answers-Approximately 50% (prob slightly less) of the kVP

Things to do when you xray a baby - Answers-Lower the kVP (you don't need as much to penetrate), keep mAs similar or slightly lower

Don't use a grid

Review of Medical Dosimetry William Amestoy, 2015-03-03 This study guide will be a reliable support and easy-to-use source of information for students in the fields of dosimetry, physics, radiation oncology, and therapy as they progress through the educational levels in preparation for board examinations. The theoretical and practical knowledge gained by students on previous courses or in clinical settings is reinforced by means of almost 1200 questions and accompanying detailed analytical answers. In order to cater for the needs of all students, the questions are arranged according to three levels of difficulty. The level 1 questions are mainly intended for those hoping to pass the Medical Dosimetrist Certification Board (MDCB) exam but will also be beneficial for Medical Physics candidates taking written exams and for Radiation Oncology residents. The level II questions are in general clinically related and will be relevant for any student, while the level III questions are advanced and are especially suitable for American Board of Radiology candidates or those taking equivalent exams elsewhere in the world. The study guide is broken down into different subject areas with provision of multiple questions and answers on each subject. In addition, the mathematical and physics questions include brief explanations of how the student can solve each problem. At the end of the guide, three practice tests are included with the same number of questions as are found in the MDCB exam. These tests will help students to test their knowledge and improve their test-taking speed.
