As a result more and more writing teachers have found themselves working with these English as a Second Language ESL students in writing classes that are designed primarily with monolingual native English speaking students in mind. Since the majority of institutions require these students to enroll in writing courses at all levels it is becoming increasingly important for all writing teachers to be aware of the presence and special linguistic and cultural needs of ESL writers. This increase in the ESL population has over the last 40 years been paralleled by a similar growth in research on ESL writing and writing instruction research that writing teachers need to be familiar with in order to work effectively with ESL writers in writing classrooms of all levels and types. Until recently however this body of knowledge has not been very accessible to writing teachers and researchers who do not specialize in second language research and instruction. This volume is an attempt to remedy this problem by providing a sense of how ESL writing scholarship has evolved over the last four decades. It brings together 15 articles that address various issues in second language writing in general and ESL writing in particular. In selecting articles for inclusion the editors tried to take a principled approach. The articles included in this volume have been chosen from a large database of publications in second language writing. The editors looked for works that mirrored the state of the art when they were published and made a conscious effort to represent a wide variety of perspectives contributions and issues in the field. To provide a sense of the evolution of the field this collection is arranged in chronological order.

Undergraduates in a Second Language Ilona Leki, 2007 This is the first book length study of bilingual international and immigrant students in English writing courses that attempts to fully embed their writing experiences within the broader frame of their personal histories the human context of their development and the disciplinary contexts of their majors It addresses the questions How useful are L2 writing courses for the students who are required to take them What do the students carry with them from these courses to their other disciplinary courses across the curriculum What happens to these students after they leave ESL English or writing classes Drawing on data from a 5 year longitudinal study of four university students for whom English was not their strongest primary language it captures their literacy experiences throughout their undergraduate careers The intensive case studies answer some questions and raise others about these students academic development as it entwined with their social experiences and identity formation and with the ideological context of studying at a US university in the 1990s Subject Guide to Books in Print ,2001 Русский Язык

,1995 Linking Literacies Diane Dewhurst Belcher,Alan Hirvela,2001 Linking Literacies provides the most up to date theoretical overview of the connection between reading and writing in second language acquisition Belcher and Hirvela have brought together the definitive collection of developments in reading writing relations research and pedagogy Papers are organized into these parts Ground Practice Theory Research and History In the Classroom Teaching Reading as Writing and Writing as Reading E Merging Literacies and the Challenge of Textual Ownership Technology Assisted Reading and Writing In addition to examining the ways in which L1 influences have affected the development of L2 reading writing theory and pedagogy Linking Literacies looks at how L2 reading writing scholarship has created an identity separate of an L1 framework Linking Literacies examines a broad range of questions and concerns within the structure of L2 reading writing connections and L2 academic literacy through discussions of theory research and Forthcoming Books Rose Arny,1994 Refiguring Prose Style T.R. Johnson,Tom Pace,2005-10-30 For about two decades say Johnson and Pace the discussion of how to address prose style in teaching college writing has been stuck with style standing in as a proxy for other stakes in the theory wars The traditional argument is evidently still quite persuasive to some that teaching style is mostly a matter of teaching generic conventions through repetition and practice Such a position usually presumes the traditional view of composition as essentially a service course one without content of its own On the other side the shortcomings of this argument have been much discussed that it neglects invention revision context meaning even truth that it is not congruent with research that it ignores 100 years of scholarship establishing composition s intellectual territory beyond service The discussion is stuck there and all sides have been giving it a rest in recent scholarship Yet style remains of vital practical interest to the field because everyone has to teach it one way or another A consequence of the impasse is that a theory of style itself has not been well articulated Johnson and Pace suggest that moving the field toward a better consensus will require establishing style as a clearer subject of inquiry Accordingly this collection takes up a comprehensive study of the subject Part I explores the recent history of composition studies the ways it has figured and all but effaced the whole question of prose style Part II takes to heart Elbow s suggestion that composition and literature particularly as conceptualized in the context of creative writing courses have something to learn from each other Part III sketches practical classroom procedures for heightening students abilities to engage style and part IV explores new theoretical frameworks for defining this vital and much neglected territory The hope of the essays here focusing as they do on historical aesthetic practical and theoretical issues is to awaken composition studies to the possibilities of style and in turn to rejuvenate a great many classrooms
