From Is to Ought: The Place of Normative Models in the Study of Human Thought Shira Elqayam,David E. Over,2016-08-12 In the study of human thinking two main research questions can be asked Descriptive Q What is human thinking like Normative Q What ought human thinking be like For decades these two questions have dominated the field and the relationship between them generated many a controversy Empirical normativist approaches regard the answers to these questions as positively correlated in essence human thinking is what it ought to be although what counts as the ought standard is moot In contemporary theories of reasoning and decision making this is often associated with a Panglossian framework an adaptationist approach which regards human thinking as a priori rational In contrast prescriptive normativism sees the answers to these two questions as negatively correlated Normative models are still relevant to human thought but human behaviour deviates from them quite markedly with the invited conclusion that humans are often irrational Prescriptive normativism often results in a Meliorist agenda which sees rationality as amenable to education Both empirical and prescriptive normativism can be contrasted with a descriptivist framework for psychology of human thinking Following Hume s strict divide between the is and the ought descriptivism regards the descriptive and normative research questions as uncorrelated or dissociated with only the former question suitable for psychological study of human behaviour This basic division carries over to the relation between normative ought rationality based on conforming to normative standards and instrumental is rationality based on achieving one s goals Descriptivist approaches regard the two as dissociated whereas normativist approaches tend to see them as closely linked with normative arguments defining and justifying instrumental rationality This research topic brings together diverse contributions to the continuing debate Featuring contributions from leading researchers in the field the e book covers a wide range of subjects arranged by six sections The standard picture Normativist perspectives In defence of soft normativism Exploring normative models Descriptivist perspectives Evolutionary and ecological accounts Empirical reports With a total of some 24 articles from 55 authors this comprehensive treatment includes theoretical analyses meta theoretical critiques commentaries and a range of empirical reports The contents of the Research Topic should appeal to psychologists linguists philosophers and cognitive scientists with research interests in a wide range of domains from language through reasoning judgment and decision making and moral judgment to epistemology and theory of mind philosophical logic and meta ethics

Machine Learning for Ecology and Sustainable Natural Resource Management Grant Humphries, Dawn R. Magness, Falk Huettmann, 2018-11-05 Ecologists and natural resource managers are charged with making complex management decisions in the face of a rapidly changing environment resulting from climate change energy development urban sprawl invasive species and globalization Advances in Geographic Information System GIS technology digitization online data availability historic legacy datasets remote sensors and the ability to collect data on animal movements via satellite and GPS have given rise to large highly complex datasets These datasets could be utilized for making critical management decisions but are often messy and difficult to interpret Basic artificial intelligence algorithms i.e. machine learning are powerful tools that are shaping the world and must be taken advantage of in the life sciences In ecology machine learning algorithms are critical to helping resource managers synthesize information to better understand complex ecological systems Machine Learning has a wide variety of powerful applications with three general uses that are of particular interest to ecologists 1 data exploration to gain system knowledge and generate new hypotheses 2 predicting ecological patterns in space and time and 3 pattern recognition for ecological sampling Machine learning can be used to make predictive assessments even when relationships between variables are poorly understood When traditional techniques fail to capture the relationship between variables effective use of machine learning can unearth and capture previously unattainable insights into an ecosystem's complexity Currently many ecologists do not utilize machine learning as a part of the scientific process This volume highlights how machine learning techniques can complement the traditional methodologies currently applied in this field
