through a certain number of the cars, I decided that the number when stopped would be too many for the people to get out of, across the road. The crowd had swelled, however, immensely, and would require an even longer time. The train had stopped and I thought it was disappoingtng nothing to hurry and get off immediately. The men below were in a state of great excitement when they observed the immense crowd, and many of them were shouting, you thought, impudently. Please note that all actions and the resulting consequences, however trivial they may be, have an effect. However, when I thought about everything the greater and greater effect there will be, because there
