MECHANICAL

6. Cylinder Head

- The cylinder head is made of aluminum casting.
- Each combustion chamber in the cylinder head is a compact, pentroof design. The spark plug is located at the center of the combustion chamber, which contributes to creation of a wide "squish area" for increased combustion efficiency.
- The two intake and two exhaust valves are arranged on opposite sides for a cross-flow feature.
- The cylinder head gasket is a metallic gasket consisting of three layers of the stainless steel sheets. The gasket is highly resistant to heat and maintains high level of sealing performance for a long period.

- (1) Intake valve (hollow type)
(2) Intake port
(3) Squish area
(4) Combustion chamber
- (5) Exhaust port
(6) Exhaust valve (sodium-filled)
(7) Spark plug

covers issues of innovation employment and characteristics of the firm The findings indicate that innovation was common in Swedish KIBS firms and that innovations often had an impact on employment However the thesis did not detect a straightforward relation between type of innovation technological process innovation organisational process innovation goods product innovation and service product innovation and the impact on employment Explanations other than type of innovation have to be considered to analyse the impact of innovation on employment The thesis further suggests that although innovation in KIBS is common innovation itself is difficult to conceptualise and delineate The New Service Economy Luis Rubalcaba-Bermejo, 2007 Exploring the dimensions available empirical evidence and associated policy implications this book investigates the challenges facing the global economy including employment productivity innovation and competitiveness It is intended for researchers and policymakers professionals in service firms and students in international business

Tanzania Service Availability Mapping, 2005-2006, 2007 We Can Work it Out Desiree van Welsum, Xavier Reif, 2006 This paper examines the relationship between the share of employment potentially affected by offshoring and economic and structural factors including trade in business services and foreign direct investment FDI using simple descriptive regressions for a panel of OECD economies between 1996 and 2003 It tests whether there are differences in the factors driving the shares of potentially offshorable non clerical and clerical occupations in total employment The results show a positive statistical association between the share of both non clerical and clerical occupations potentially affected by offshoring and exports of business services and a negative association with imports of business services However the results also show important differences between different types of occupations as they behave differently over time and are affected differently by variables included in the model In particular net outward manufacturing FDI ICT investment and the relative size of the services sector all have a positive association with the share of potentially offshorable non clerical occupations but are negative with clerical occupations Union density has a positive statistical association with clerical occupations but negative with non clerical occupations These results have important implications for policy as they clearly suggest that different factors are driving the performance of different occupational groups
