

CHC2D – Canadian History Since World One
Unit 1 – Lesson #2
1916 – The Battle of the Somme & Letters from the Trenches

Background

- 1915 saw both sides in the war attempt to break the stalemate which developed in the fall of 1914.
- They used new weapons like chlorine gas.
- They tried to bring new allies into the war as Italy joined the Entente and the Ottoman Empire joined the Central Powers.
- None of these changes were able to break the stalemate of trench warfare.

A New Strategy

- Unable to break through the heavily defended trenches, generals began to consider new strategies in an attempt to win the war.
- The Germans, who had a larger population than France, decided that the only way to win the war was to kill more French soldiers than they lost in battles.
- Gaining territory was no longer the goal of a battle, killing more of the enemy was.

War of Attrition

- The new goal of war was known as attrition, kill more of the enemy than you lost.
- The idea was for Germany to take advantage of its larger population by turning the war into a marathon rather than a sprint.
- This way, heavier French losses would not be able to be replaced by its smaller population and Germany would force France to surrender.

Battles of 1916

- The Germans planned to use the idea of attrition at the battle of Verdun where they attacked the French forces.
- The French, who were losing so many men that their soldiers started to disobey their orders, this is called mutiny.
- With their army in chaos, the French government pleaded with its British ally to attack the German lines in the North.

The Somme

- The British agreed to assist their French allies by attacking the Germans near the Somme river.
- The Somme became part of a year long series of battles including Verdun and others including Russia vs Austria & Germany and Italy vs Austria.
- 1916 would become the most tragic year for the average soldier of World War I.

The Plan

- The Somme was a massive battle fought along nearly 30 kilometers of trenches.
- The British planned to attack the German trenches on July 1.
- For eight days before July 1, the British were constantly bombarding the German trenches hoping to destroy the barbed wire and concrete bunkers defending them.

The Maritime Archaeology of a Modern Conflict Innes McCartney, 2014-10-24 Over the last 30 years hydrographical marine surveys in the English Channel helped uncover the potential wreck sites of German submarines or U boats sunk during the conflicts of World War I and World War II Through a series of systemic dives nautical archaeologist and historian Innes McCartney surveyed and recorded these wrecks discovering that the distribution and number of wrecks conflicted with the published histories of U boat losses Of all the U boat war losses in the Channel McCartney found that some 41% were heretofore unaccounted for in the historical literature of World War I and World War II This book reconciles these inaccuracies with the archaeological record by presenting case
