

THE 13 MAIN ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES

BY NICOLAS BOUCHER

ACCRUAL

Transactions need to be recorded in the time period in which they occur, regardless of when the actual cash flows for the transaction are received

1

CONSISTENCY

Once you adopt an accounting principle or method, you should continue to use it until a demonstrably better principle or method comes along

3

ECONOMIC ENTITY

Transactions of a business should be kept separate from those of its owners and other businesses

5

GOING CONCERN

A business will remain in operation for the foreseeable future

7

MATERIALITY

All items that are reasonably likely to impact investors' decision-making must be recorded or reported in detail in a business's financial statements

9

RELIABILITY

Only those transactions that can be proven should be recorded

11

TIME PERIOD

A business should report their financial statements appropriate to a specific time period

13

2

CONSERVATISM

Requires company accounts to be prepared with caution and high degrees of verification. All probable losses are recorded when they are discovered, while gains can only be registered when they are fully realized

4

COST

A business should only record its assets, liabilities, and equity investments at their original purchase costs

6

FULL DISCLOSURE

A company should include in or alongside its financial statements all of the information that may impact a reader's understanding of those statements

8

MATCHING

Companies need to report expenses at the same time as the revenues they are related to

10

MONETARY

Business transactions should only be recorded if they can be expressed in terms of a currency. In other words, anything that is non-quantifiable should not be recorded in a business' financial accounts

12

REVENUE RECOGNITION

You should only recognize revenue when it is earned
