Advances in Human Aspects of Transportation: Part III Neville Stanton,Steven Landry, Giuseppe Di Bucchianico,Andrea Vallicelli,2022-07-19 Human Factors and Ergonomics have made a considerable contribution to the research design development operation and analysis of transportation systems which includes road and rail vehicles and their complementary infrastructure aviation and maritime transportation This book presents recent advances in the Human Factors aspects of Transportation These advances include accident analysis automation of vehicles comfort distraction of drivers understanding of distraction and how to avoid it environmental concerns in vehicle systems design intelligent transport systems methodological developments new systems and technology observational and case studies safety situation awareness skill development and training warnings and workload This book brings together the most recent human factors work in the transportation domain including empirical research human performance and other types of modeling analysis and development The issues facing engineers scientists and other practitioners of human factors in transportation research are becoming more challenging and more critical The common theme across these sections is that they deal with the intersection of the human and the system. Moreover many of the chapter topics cross section boundaries for instance by focusing on function allocation in NextGen or on the safety benefits of a tower controller tool. This is in keeping with the systemic nature of the problems facing human factors experts in rail and road aviation and maritime research it is becoming increasingly important to view problems not as isolated issues that can be extracted from the system environment but as embedded issues that can only be understood as a part of an overall system.

Environmental Systems, Committee on the Assessment of Technologies for Improving Fuel Economy of Light-Duty Vehicles, Phase 2, 2015-09-28

The light duty vehicle fleet is expected to undergo substantial technological changes over the next several decades. New powertrain designs, alternative fuels, advanced materials and significant changes to the vehicle body are being driven by increasingly stringent fuel economy and greenhouse gas emission standards. By the end of the next decade cars and light duty trucks will be more fuel efficient, weigh less, emit less air pollutants, have more safety features and will be more expensive to purchase relative to current vehicles. Though the gasoline powered spark ignition engine will continue to be the dominant powertrain configuration even through 2030, such vehicles will be equipped with advanced technologies, materials, electronics and controls, and aerodynamics. And by 2030 the deployment of alternative methods to propel and fuel vehicles and alternative modes of transportation including autonomous vehicles will be well underway. What are these new technologies, how will they work, and will some technologies be more effective than others? Written to inform The United States Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) and greenhouse gas (GHG) emission standards, this new report from the National Research Council is a technical evaluation of costs, benefits and implementation issues of fuel reduction technologies for next generation light duty vehicles.

Cost Effectiveness and Deployment of Fuel Economy Technologies for Light Duty Vehicles estimates the cost, potential efficiency improvements and barriers to commercial deployment of technologies that might be employed from 2020 to 2030. This report describes these promising technologies and makes recommendations for their inclusion on the list of technologies applicable for the 2017-2025 CAFE standards.
