Critical success factors and best practices for business succession. Daniel Scheffold,2014-03-03 Master s Thesis from the year 2013 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1 3 University of Applied Sciences Stuttgart Fakult t f r Wirtschaft course General Management International Business Management language English abstract Purpose Knowledge of the factors that influence success in the succession of family businesses is limited Despite recent studies theory cannot explain why only 10 % of all family businesses make it to the third generation The aim of this dissertation is to identify critical success factors for succession in family businesses Methodology A qualitative multiple case study design with third generation family businesses two from Germany and one from the UK was employed A cross case analysis was carried out to identify critical success factors and then complemented by a single case analysis Findings Nine of the ten tested hypotheses were confirmed These were successor development professionalization knowledge transfer capital structure corporate governance family harmony stepping aside succession planning and long term orientation The hypothesis about dividend policy was not confirmed No significant differences were found to be based on national influence Practical Implications From the results a new model for family business succession is developed which leads to four best practice recommendations These are the implementation of shared leadership linking ownership to management ensure communication in the family to create family harmony and the use of outside consultants Limitations Due to the case study design this research does not provide statistical generalizable findings Originality Value This study increases the knowledge about critical success factors of succession in family businesses The use of cases from two countries and three different industries increases the significance The newly developed model for family business succession proposes a new view on the succession process that should be tested by future studies

Accounting for Research Quality Michael Rowlinson,2015 The question of whether and how research quality should be measured and the consequences of research audits such as the UK's Research Excellence Framework REF formerly the RAE are considered in relation to the role of journal ratings such as the Association of Business Schools Academic Journal Quality Guide the ABS Guide Criticism of the ABS Guide has distracted attention from the results of successive RAEs where the panel for Business and Management has been one of the most selective in its allocation of the highest grades especially when compared with the neighbouring field of Economics If the ABS Guide had been used to grade outputs submitted for Business and Management in the RAE 2008 then many more outputs would have received the highest grades especially in accounting where outputs from journals such as Critical Perspectives on Accounting which are highly rated in the ABS Guide appear to have been downgraded by the RAE panel The alleged bias against accounting in the ABS Guide rests on a particular interpretation of citation impact factors for journals and a narrow definition of subject fields With an estimated ratio of 71 full time students per research active faculty member in UK business schools it may be time to consider a more appropriate inclusive and economical form of ranking for research in business and management
