neurobiology and artificial intelligence ask many questions about the nature of the mind and body originating in ancient Greek philosophy. Among those are also questions about the relationship between humans and machines and the implications this carries for solving traditional problems within philosophy. In this book the term machine is taken to refer to every system which in the contemporary world tries to make a task easier for humans or even tries to replace the human altogether such as a humanoid robot able to perform different physical activities as well as various mental activities like decision making and problem solving. The volume makes the first step towards a connection between certain different disciplines involved in education. The gap between neurochemistry, cognitive science, neurobiology, and other rapidly developing disciplines on one side and education as part of social sciences on the other currently appears to be great and even unbridgeable except by analogy, metonymy, and metaphor. From the experiences of recent years it seems clear that the existing educational system as a whole is perceived as an ailing system that fails to meet the needs of a major portion of the society it serves. This book brings to attention a form of learning that transcends logic and rhetorical appeal. It defines appropriate architecture on the basis of cognitive science and methods of artificial intelligence taking into account that a school system is a dynamical system which follows the dynamical systems theory. The volume shows how to build an intelligent tutoring system and an intelligent teaching learning system upon it. Through the use of intelligent tutoring systems students are placed in an active role as opposed to the passive role that they more or less have today.

Enabling People-Centered Risk Communication for Geohazards Alessandro Amato, Sally H. Potter, Anna Scolobig, Eric M. Thompson, 2024-07-18. In the field of natural hazards, communicating science with the public and stakeholders involves entering the challenging and complex world of hazard and risk communication, the ultimate purpose of which is to reduce the impact of impending hazards on people at risk. According to the Sendai Framework 2015-2030, it is important to strengthen the utilization of media including social media, traditional media, big data, and mobile phone networks to support national measures for successful disaster risk communication. Sometimes risk communication has collateral and unexpected side effects that may lead to the adoption of inadequate behaviors. In some instances, this can even result in legal actions being taken against scientists and/or emergency managers. The role of the media should be to facilitate the accurate communication of hazard and risk information, but such communication is often hampered by the fact that journalists have different agendas and priorities than scientists, risk communicators, and emergency managers. This does not always support people in their decision making. Accurate communication of hazard and risk is especially important when decisions have to be made within contexts where uncertainty is very high. This is often the case with geohazards such as earthquakes, tsunamis, volcanic eruptions, and landslides.
