Paired Passage A: Knights of the Middle Ages

Level 2

Knights were brave and skilled. This time in history lasted from 1500. Knights lived in Europe and war. They protected castles, rode into bat code called chivalry. Knights were eq and protect the weak. They were per nobility, which meant they were rich.

Becoming a knight took many years. Boys from rich families started first, they became pages and learned manners and reading. At about age 14, they learned to ride horses, use swords, and help real knights during battle. When they were brave, they were made knights around age 21. Knights had rules and promises in order to keep their honor. The code of chivalry included protect the helpless, respect women, and be loyal to your lord.

Knights wore armor made of metal to protect themselves in battle. It was over 50 pounds, which made it hard to walk or run. They carried swords, but some knights used axes, maces or bows, not just swords. They trained for battle. Knights didn't just fight but also joined tournaments in communities. Sometimes, they traveled long distances far from home to new lands. Today, knights are no longer needed in battle. Knights have been in fairy tales, and movies that show their bravery and adventure. Children like even dressing up in a costume for Halloween. Knights may be part of the adventures continue to inspire people of all ages today.
