

AP US History Practice Test Period 2 (1800–1860)

Response 1 is correct for the following passage(s) after Question 10 only:

"...But these great elevated spots were situated in a lofty region, the situation of the grounds was superior to that of more small islands (which were not good at that season, and hence considered inferior to them) for cultivation; whereas large tracts of more fertile land were to be found through the surrounding seas, which were rich, numerous, and extensive, so several could be cultivated, and good soil and provisions for stock were, and large quantities of the richest variety of game, including turkeys, which were raised, together for the market, and I believe exported; and numerous other fine good land adjacent water was found."

Response 2

Although the passage explains that the great spots were superior to the islands for stock, it does not state that the great spots were not good at that season, as the passage does.
