

Introduction

This paper shows how a neural network learns to solve a complex 3D visual reasoning task. We show that different groups of experts can be found and their expertise, reliability, and bias can be characterized from their reasoning and how "The 3D Reasoning Order" of the experts changes over time. We also show how the experts' reasoning and their reliability are related to the "Reasoning Order" of the experts. The experts' reasoning order corresponds to the groups of experts having different expertise and different reasoning characteristics and the reasoning order is related to the expert's expertise and the expert's reasoning order.
