Large, Cyrille Magne, 2016-07-29 The interplay between musical training and speech perception continues to intrigue researchers in the areas of language and music alike Historically language function has been attributed to brain regions localized predominately in left hemisphere whereas music has been attributed to right hemisphere dominant regions Recent studies demonstrating neural overlap for processing speech and music and enhanced speech perception and production in musicians suggest that these regions may be inextricably intertwined The extent of neural overlap between music and speech remains hotly debated with surprisingly little empirical research exploring specific neural homologs and analogs Moreover despite recognition that shared processes likely exist throughout development and depend upon an individual's acoustic experiences even less research exists on how overlapping neural structures for music and language are affected by developmental trajectories Nonetheless the field is well poised to address key empirical questions in part because of the recent development of new theories that address the neural and developmental interaction between music and language processing in conjunction with the broad availability of sophisticated tools for quantifying brain activity and dynamics To understand the overlap of neural structures for language and music processing research is needed to identify those specific functions of each that influence the other with areas for enhanced perception of pitch and onset time having already been targeted Research is also needed to identify the extent to which this overlap is developed in infancy or early childhood and the process by which it affects neural reorganization plasticity and trainability in adulthood For this research topic we would like to further explore the relationship between language and music in the brain from two perspectives 1 understanding the nature of shared neural and cognitive processing for music and language and 2 understanding the developmental trajectory of these neural systems and how they are influenced by experience We seek to gather technically diverse original research articles that present new empirical findings relevant to understanding 1 When in the brain acoustic information becomes processed specifically as language or music The shared and independent neural structures for processing music and language 3 How acoustic experiences such as musical training influence overlap of neural structures for language and music 4 How the overlap of processing regions changes over time due to experiences at any developmental stage

Puccini's Turandot William Ashbrook, Harold Powers, 2014-12-25 Unfinished at Puccini's death in 1924 Turandot was not only his most ambitious work but it became the last Italian opera to enter the international repertory In this colorful study two renowned music scholars demonstrate that this work despite the modern climate in which it was written was a fitting finale for the centuries old Great Tradition of Italian opera Here they provide concrete instances of how a listener might encounter the dramatic and musical structures of Turandot in light of the Italian melodramma and firmly establish Puccini's last work within the tradition of Rossini Bellini Donizetti and Verdi In a summary of the sounds sights and symbolism of Turandot the authors touch on earlier treatments of the subject outline the conception birth and reception of the work and analyze its coordinated dramatic and musical design Showing how the evolution of the libretto documents Puccini's reversion to large musical forms typical of the Great Tradition in the late nineteenth century they give particular attention to his use of contrasting Romantic modernist and two kinds of orientalist coloration in the general musical structure They suggest that Puccini's inability to complete the opera resulted mainly from inadequate dramatic buildup for Turandot's last minute change of heart combined with an overly successful treatment of the secondary character

Analysis of 18th and 19th Century Musical Works in the Classical Tradition is a textbook for upper level undergraduate and graduate courses in music analysis. It outlines a process of analyzing works in the Classical tradition by uncovering the construction of a piece of music: the formal, harmonic, rhythmic, and voice-leading organizations as well as its unique features. The text develops an in-depth approach that is applied to works by composers including Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms. The book begins with foundational chapters in music theory, starting with basic diatonic harmony and progressing rapidly to more advanced topics such as phrase design, phrase expansion, and chromatic harmony. The second part contains analyses of complete musical works and movements. The text features over 150 musical examples, including numerous complete annotated scores. Suggested assignments at the end of each chapter guide students in their own musical analysis.
