JMP Release 6, 2005 Predicting Species Occurrences J. Michael Scott, Patricia Heglund, Michael L. Morrison, 2002-02 Predictions about where different species are where they are not and how they move across a landscape or respond to human activities if timber is harvested for instance or stream flow altered are important aspects of the work of wildlife biologists land managers and the agencies and policymakers that govern natural resources Despite the increased use and importance of model predictions these predictions are seldom tested and have unknown levels of accuracy Predicting Species Occurrences addresses those concerns highlighting for managers and researchers the strengths and weaknesses of current approaches as well as the magnitude of the research required to improve or test predictions of currently used models The book is an outgrowth of an international symposium held in October 1999 that brought together scientists and researchers at the forefront of efforts to process information about species at different spatial and temporal scales It is a comprehensive reference that offers an exhaustive treatment of the subject with 65 chapters by leading experts from around the world that review the history of the theory and practice of modeling and present a standard terminology examine temporal and spatial scales in terms of their influence on patterns and processes of species distribution offer detailed discussions of state of the art modeling tools and descriptions of methods for assessing model accuracy discuss how to predict species presence and abundance present examples of how spatially explicit data on demographics can provide important information for managers An introductory chapter by Michael A Huston examines the ecological context in which predictions of species occurrences are made and a concluding chapter by John A Wiens offers an insightful review and synthesis of the topics examined along with guidance for future directions and cautions regarding misuse of models Other contributors include Michael P Austin Barry R Noon Alan H Fielding Michael Goodchild Brian A Maurer John T Rotenberry Paul Angermeier Pierre R Vernier and more than a hundred others Predicting Species Occurrences offers important new information about many of the topics raised in the seminal volume Wildlife 2000 University of Wisconsin Press 1986 and will be the standard reference on this subject for years to come Its state of the art assessment will play a key role in guiding the continued development and application of tools for making accurate predictions and is an indispensable volume for anyone engaged in species management or conservation

New Techniques and Technologies for Statistics II, 1997 The compilation and deployment of statistical techniques is nowadays almost universally based on computing systems Rapidly changing technology is expanding the options available for improving the quality range and delivery of statistics whilst reducing the cost and at the same time is putting pressure on producers and users to keep up with the latest techniques both as management views develop of what is possible and simply through peer group pressure In the areas of official statistics it is clear that new technologies will change our approach to the whole range to activities from systems design through data collection processing analysis and dissemination to the structure of the European Statistical System and internal organization of national statistical institutes Eurostat has a central role in promoting and coordinating the development and use of statistics in public administrations which extends to the adoption of new techniques and technologies as they are proven validated An important aspect of this role is to anticipate needs to stimulate encourage and fund research work of common interest to support national initiatives and to prove a forum for discussion In this new book techniques and technologies in statistics are described The needs and constraints of official staticians are described as well as the latest developments of researchers The book presents the research and development projects funded by the European Commission in the development of statistical tools and techniques under the R D framework programme and the progress to date in the current Development of Statistical Information Systems DOSIS programme
