

The diagram is a complex electrical schematic for a ship's system. It features a central horizontal busbar with numerous connections. Above the busbar, there are several rows of circular components, likely pumps or valves, each with its own set of control wires. To the right, a large circular component, possibly a motor or generator, is connected to the main system. Below the busbar, there are more circular components and a series of rectangular blocks, possibly representing different sections of the ship's electrical network. The diagram is filled with a dense network of lines representing electrical wires, connecting various components and components to the busbar. Labels in various fonts and sizes are scattered throughout, identifying specific parts and their functions. The overall layout is organized but highly detailed, typical of a technical drawing from a mid-20th-century manual.
