Data and Text Processing for Health and Life Sciences Francisco M. Couto, 2019-06-10 This open access book is a step by step introduction on how shell scripting can help solve many of the data processing tasks that Health and Life specialists face everyday with minimal software dependencies The examples presented in the book show how simple command line tools can be used and combined to retrieve data and text from web resources to filter and mine literature and to explore the semantics encoded in biomedical ontologies To store data this book relies on open standard text file formats such as TSV CSV XML and OWL that can be open by any text editor or spreadsheet application The first two chapters Introduction and Resources provide a brief introduction to the shell scripting and describe popular data resources in Health and Life Sciences The third chapter Data Retrieval starts by introducing a common data processing task that involves multiple data resources Then this chapter explains how to automate each step of that task by introducing the required commands line tools one by one The fourth chapter Text Processing shows how to filter and analyze text by using simple string matching techniques and regular expressions The last chapter Semantic Processing shows how XPath queries and shell scripting is able to process complex data such as the graphs used to specify ontologies Besides being almost immutable for more than four decades and being available in most of our personal computers shell scripting is relatively easy to learn by Health and Life specialists as a sequence of independent commands Comprehending them is like conducting a new laboratory protocol by testing and understanding its procedural steps and variables and combining their intermediate results Thus this book is particularly relevant to Health and Life specialists or students that want to easily learn how to process data and text and which in return may facilitate and inspire them to acquire deeper bioinformatics skills in the future

By 2050 the world's population is projected to grow by one third reaching between 9 and 10 billion. With globalization and expected growth in global affluence a substantial increase in per capita meat, dairy and fish consumption is also anticipated. The demand for calories from animal products will nearly double highlighting the critical importance of the world's animal agriculture system. Ensuring sustainable agricultural growth will be essential to addressing this global challenge to food security.

Critical Role of Animal Science Research in Food Security and Sustainability identifies areas of research and development, technology and resource needs for research in the field of animal agriculture both nationally and internationally. This report assesses the global demand for products of animal origin in 2050 within the framework of ensuring global food security. It evaluates how climate change and natural resource constraints may impact the ability to meet future global demand for animal products in sustainable production systems and identifies factors that may impact the ability of the United States to meet demand for animal products including the need for trained human capital, product safety and quality, and effective communication and adoption of new knowledge, information and technologies. The agricultural sector worldwide faces numerous daunting challenges that will require innovations, new technologies and new ways of approaching agriculture if the food, feed and fiber needs of the global population are to be met. The recommendations of Critical Role of Animal Science Research in Food Security and Sustainability will inform a new roadmap for animal science research to meet the challenges of sustainable animal production in the 21st century.
