

Activity 10.8: Half-Life Experiment

This experiment is designed to help you understand the concept of half-life. You will need the following materials to complete this activity:

32 nickels

32 pennies

Red and blue colored pencils

- Step 1: Place the 32 nickels heads-side up on the lab table. These represent atoms of the radioactive parent isotope.
- Step 2: Place the nickels into a container, shake well, and dump them onto the lab table.
- Step 3: Count and remove all the nickels that are tails-side up. The nickels you remove represent parent atoms that have decayed. Replace each tails-side-up nickel with a penny. The pennies represent daughter atoms.
- Step 4: On the chart in Figure 10.18, record the number of remaining nickels (heads-side up) and the pennies that represent the daughter atoms. The combined total should equal 32 coins.

Step 5: Place these coins in the container and repeat steps 3 and 4 until only one or two nickels remain.

After you have completed the exercise (Trial 1), use a blue pencil to plot on the graph in Figure 10.19 the number of nickels that remained at each interval. Connect the points with a solid line, which represents the change in parent atom over time. Next, use a red pencil to plot the number of pennies at each interval on the same graph. Connect the points with a solid line, which represents the change in the number of daughter atoms over time.
