The World of Mythical Creatures

A dragon is a creature that breathes fire.

For thousands of years, stories of mythical creatures have captured the imaginations of people all over the world. These creatures make their appearances in legends, folk tales and bedtime stories and each have their own unique powers and personalities. Some are mischievous, big or small, unpredictable or helpful, winged or normal. In fact, mythical beings are the same. Let's dive into the world of mythology and learn more about some creatures from all over the globe!

Asia: The Dragon

Let's start our journey through the world of mythical beings in Asia. One of the most famous mythical beings in Asian countries is the dragon. In Asian cultures, dragons are seen as a symbol of wisdom, strength and good luck. The dragons in these myths and stories are wise and helpful guardians. During the Lunar New Year, dragon dances are performed in many different countries, such as China, Taiwan and Korea.

Asia: The Kappa

The kappa is a creature from Japanese folklore that's said to live in rivers and ponds. The kappa resembles a mix between a monkey and a turtle, and it has webbed hands and feet. They're known for mischievous tricks that enjoy playing pranks on humans who get too close to their watery home. But they can also be helpful if they're treated with respect. Kappas carry a small bowl of water on their heads, which is said to be the source of their power.

Europe: The Befana

Befanas are creatures from European folk tales that look like tiny persons. They are often said to live in people's homes, where they help humans with house work and chores in exchange for porridge and milk. There are many different kinds of gnomes like the Befana (from the Italian version) or the Bambotan (from Spain). Most gnomes are kind and helpful, but don't forget to give them something to eat, or they'll leave!

Europe: The Buitreño

Buitreños are legendary figures from Irish mythology. They're described as ugly old women dressed in rags. They have long, unkempt hair and a ghostly glow about them. If you see a buitreño on the way, it's an ill omen. It means someone in your family will soon die. Of course, this caused many people to be afraid of buitreños and spread the idea of never coming across one.

Africa: Anansi the Spider

Anansi the spider is a well-known creature in West African mythology. Anansi is especially famous in Ghana. This creature isn't just a spider: Anansi is a playful trickster god. The spider uses its sharp wit and cleverness to outsmart other creatures on humans. Many of the stories about the spider Anansi serve to teach lessons about problem-solving and showing kindness to the less fortunate. Because of this, the stories about Anansi are passed down to the told throughout Africa.

Africa: Mokole-Mokole

In the heart of Africa, you'll hear stories of the mokole-mokole, a creature that's said to live in the Congo River Basin. It's described as having a small head with a long neck, a big body with spiky skin, and a long tail. These descriptions, as well as ancient drawings of the creature, strongly resemble dinosaurs. This makes some people believe the mokole-mokole isn't a mythical creature at all, but a real animal that once roamed.

The mokole-mokole is a prehistoric creature.

North America: The Thunderbird

The thunderbird is a powerful creature in the mythology of many Indigenous tribes in North America. It's a giant bird with wings as large they create thunder when they fly. Lightning is said to flash from its eyes, and rainbows appear whenever it flies. These mighty birds are seen as protectors of nature, representing principles of the force of nature and the elements.

South America: The Macuquino of Colombia

Not all mythical creatures have featured in our stories and legends for centuries. El macuquino, for example, is a relatively modern addition to the mythical family tree. It originated in Latin America, more specifically in Puerto Rico. El macuquino is described as a small, mischievous creature with a row of spikes along its back that bleed red blood. Its name means "good sucker" in Spanish. Stories about this creature began to spread after macuquino were found dead and drained of blood. Many people claim to have seen the creature, but no evidence has ever been found.

Read or not?

Most of these creatures probably don't exist, or at least, scientists don't have any evidence that they might be real. But many of them might be based on real creatures. Dinosaur fossils may have been the inspiration for the mythical dragon or the mokole-mokole, and narwhal horns may have inspired the tales about the unicorn. So, biologists keep discovering new animal species around the world. Perhaps some mythical creatures might just turn out to be real after all!
