

PRESUMPTION OF DEATH

Before we proceed to how Presumption of Death acts as a ground for divorce, we must first understand its meaning. It is a view taken in both Indian as well as English law that when a person is not seen or heard from in seven years or more, he is presumed to be dead. This presumption must be made by the Judges with the due exercise of diligence and in the words of G.H. Treitel,

"...it is clear that the mere fact that a person has not been heard of is not sufficient if news of him could have been obtained by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Just as the person who seeks to set up the presumption is not bound to listen to idle gossip, so also he must not shut his eyes to possible sources of reliable information".

A common example of this can be taken when a man, who is on a sea-faring journey has been shipwrecked and not been seen or heard from for the next 7 years, the Courts here may presume the man dead. This is also called death in absentia, meaning that he has been declared dead without any actual proof of that person's death.

The burden of proof for proving whether that person is alive is on the person claiming so. However, it must be noted that Section 108 of the Indian Evidence Act only lays down as to the presumption of the existence of a person. This refers only to the death of the person, that the rule cannot be extended even after the specified period of seven years even if the period is only six years and 364 days. More specifically, this assumption does not apply to the time of the

A Presumption Of Death:

Presumption of death Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Justice Committee, 2012-02-22 When a person goes missing their family can suffer serious financial repercussions as well as inevitable pain and distress Having examined the law and processes the Committee have found that such suffering is exacerbated by a legislative patchwork of bewildering complexity the inability to administer the financial situation of their missing relatives a lack of information about the actions they are able to take and ignorance of the correct procedures to be followed by police lawyers banks insurers and others This report puts forward a threefold recommended approach Firstly the introduction of a presumption of death act to clarify the legal position Such an act should be modelled on the legislation in Scotland and Northern Ireland Presumption of death orders however can only solve some of the problems families face It will only be appropriate to declare a missing person dead several years after their disappearance In that time their financial affairs can be devastated beyond hope of recovery The Committee also therefore recommends that legislation be introduced to allow for a system of guardianship orders similar to those in Australia These will allow for the administration of the missing person's property in his or her best interests if they have not returned after three months as well as support for dependents Finally they call on the Government and industry to provide effective guidance for families in very difficult and distressing circumstances as well as those who provide services for them
