

Types of Beaks	Thin worms in Deep soil	Hard seeds and nuts found in trees/bushes	Soft seeds, nuts and flower buds
Sharp-beaked Finch ( Twice (Twice))	Best suited to finding worms which are deep in ground	Would be good to reach deep in a bush but not wide enough.	The sharp beaks would of damaged the soft seeds and flower buds.
Large broad beak (Wide bongs)	Difficult to collect and messy for the beaks	perfectly strong and wide to pick and eat large seeds.	Too wide and too strong to collect small seeds from the floor.
Small broad beak (spoons)	Too short to dig into the soil	Too small and weak to collect large nuts found in the trees.	A small but broad beak means small good scattered over a floor would be easy

The sharp-beaked finch

The sharp-beaked ground finch has evolved a beak which is small and sharp. This beak allows this finch to feed off the blood of other 'larger' birds such as masked boobies, red footed boobies and blue footed boobies. The sharp beaked finch will also jump on the back of other finches and suck their blood. This is unique amongst birds and the sharp-beaked ground finch is famed for these extraordinary feeding habits, so much so that it has also earned it the sinister pseudonym of the 'vampire finch'!

The large ground finch

The large ground finch evolved a large broad beak which it uses to feed on hard seeds and nuts. Woody nuts are its main food source. It forages either on the ground or in trees and bushes for its food. The islands where the large ground finch lives is abundant in plants that produce hard seeds and nuts.

The small ground finch

The small ground finch evolved a small broad beak which it uses to feed on soft seeds and nuts, although it is also known to eat flowers, buds, young leaves, and the occasional insect. Unlike the large ground finch its beak would not be strong enough to crack and eat hard nuts and seeds. It forages either on the ground or in low vegetation. The islands where the large ground finch lives is abundant

Donahoe, Michael G. Wessells, 1980 Critical Investigations Into Interns' Urban Teaching Apprenticeship Experiences John Lockhart, 2009 A critical task for public school teachers is to build and maintain productive relationships with their students especially to facilitate learning That task is particularly important in preparing new teachers for urban schools because cultural differences between the majority of urban teachers and their students can complicate and impair those relationships. Multicultural education literature often describes and analyzes preservice teachers typically white middle class not urban and often female who are entering urban environments as being resistant to learning about race and class. That research has usually been conducted on preservice teachers in their coursework often in the lone required diversity course and apart from practice work in the schools. This study is guided by the theory that in situations people rely upon the habits of thought feeling attitude and action they've developed through interaction with others and that people experience a strong continuity in the use of those habits during life. Though these habits may help one to negotiate situations they may also be a hindrance especially in situations significantly different from familiar ones. I studied three interns from white middle class suburban and rural backgrounds who were placed in urban high schools with many nonwhite students from working class backgrounds to examine this central question: How did the three interns use the habits they formed as honors students in mainly white monolingual middle class rural or suburban schools and communities with their characteristics to forge conceptions and practices for teaching students in urban high schools and communities with characteristics that differ appreciably? I conducted this study in the interns' placements using classroom observations, follow-up interviews, and data from university coursework to analyze the meaning of the interns' experiences for them. I highlight how interns' habitual views of race and class were consistent with descriptions in the literature and impacted their practices. However, I also analyze an important dimension not often considered: how interns' habits of being good students hindered their abilities to connect with their students who generally did not have the same positive attitude toward schools as the interns. I then present a case study of each intern to analyze their teaching practices which mostly involved lecture, worksheets, and recitation. In doing so, I demonstrate how resistance was operating but also show a variety of factors that complicated interns' efforts to develop competence as teachers, including their efforts to form relationships with their students. I explore how the interns made sense of their situations in ways that negated issues of race and class. Because the interns struggled to learn how to teach, I included but exceeded the scope of the resistance argument. I argue for a reconceptualization of resistance that recognizes it as an expected reaction when a piece of an intern's valued identity is under assault by experiences for which habits are largely unequipped to deal. I argue that such a conceptualization can help teacher educators to work with interns more effectively as learners in very unfamiliar and uncomfortable territory. I discuss some possible directions for teaching and research for teacher educators who undertake the charge of preparing future teachers to work with students from different backgrounds.
