A WARNING FROM SIMBIO ABOUT CHEATING

You should know that, among other things, we periodically tinker with the underlying models in our simulations so that the results they produce (i.e. the “right answers”) change, and we let instructors know how to recognize cheating. ## Prelude

The flat periwinkle is a small snail that lives on seaweeds growing on rocky shores in New England. Among the snail’s enemies is the European green crab. As its name suggests, the European green crab is not native to North America. It traveled from Europe early in the 19th century. Before 1900, the green crab did not occur north of Cape Cod, Massachusetts. After the turn of the century, however, the crab expanded its range northward, and is now found as far north as Newfoundland. The crab’s range expansion introduced periwinkle populations north of Cape Cod to a new predator.

Biologist Robin Seeley suspected that New England’s periwinkle populations have evolved due to predation by green crabs. In a museum, Seeley found an 1871 collection of periwinkles from Appledore Island, north of Cape Cod. She compared these old shells to new shells she had gathered herself at the same place. Seeley measured the thickness of each shell. Her data appear in the following tables.
