

Teacher Guide: The Bioethics of Gene Therapy

stakeholder points-of-view as a whole group.

- Each group should prepare a brief summary of their discussion to share with the rest of the class.

• Jigsaw – student choice

- Divide the class into three groups.
- Assign a different case study for each group to read; they will be the “experts” for their assigned case.
- Have the groups discuss questions 1-2 on the Ethical Decision-Making Model (S-4) and prepare to share their answers with other members of the class.
- Have students divide into small groups of three with each group containing one member from each of the “expert” groups.
- Have each “expert” share their case study and answers to questions 1-2 with their new group.
- Once all the experts have shared their case studies, ask the groups to choose which case is most compelling to them.
- Direct the groups to discuss questions 3-6 of the Ethical Decision Making Model (page S-4) as they relate to the case they chose and to prepare a short summary of their discussion to share with the rest of the class.

4. Extensions

- The Jesse Gelsinger story lends itself nicely to discussion and/or follow-up research. The investigation following Jesse’s death revealed important questions about:
 - lapses in reporting deaths and adverse reactions in gene therapy trials
 - potential conflicts of interest for researchers who also held stock in biotech companies that were funding the research
 - questions surrounding the experimental design of this particular gene therapy trial
 - questions about Jesse’s fitness to participate immediately before the therapy
 More information about the Gelsinger case is available in Gene Therapy: Molecular Bandage? Additional Resources (see Additional Resources, page 4).
- Follow up this activity with the Positions, Beliefs and Values activity (see Additional Resources, page 4).
