Abernathy, 2003 Accounting regulators are grappling with the trade offs between the relevance of external financial reports and maintaining the reliability and verifiability of the information provided The question is how to incorporate more financial information about intangibles into the external financial reporting and the internal systems without reducing the usefulness of the data due to measurement error This paper address that question by developing a coherent framework for the classification recognition and reporting of intangible assets that is based on sound economic principles

Journal of Information Science , 2006 ICICKM2012-Proceedings of the 9th International Conference on Intellectual Capital, Knowledge Management and Organisational Learning Fernando Chaparro, 2012 A Framework for Measuring the Value-added of Knowledge Processes with Analysis of Process

Interactions and Dynamics José Cintrón, 2013 The most known and widely used methods use cash flows and tangible assets to measure the impact of investments in the organization's outputs. But in the last decade many newer organizations whose outputs are heavily dependent on information technology utilize knowledge as their main asset. These organizations' market values lie on the knowledge of its employees and their technological capabilities. In the current technology-based business landscape the value added by assets utilized for generation of outputs cannot be appropriately measured and managed without considering the role that intangible assets and knowledge play in executing processes. The analysis of processes for comparison and decision making based on intangible value added can be accomplished using the knowledge required to execute processes. The measurement of value added by knowledge can provide a more realistic framework for analysis of processes where traditional cost methods are not appropriate, enabling managers to better allocate and control knowledge-based processes. Further consideration of interactions and complexity between proposed process alternatives can yield answers about where and when investments can improve value added while dynamically providing higher returns on investment.

The Strategy Map for General Electric Medical Systems, 2002 Nadine Pahl, 2009-03-27 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2008 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1.3 University of Applied Sciences Berlin Master of Business Administration course Strategic Management language English abstract If you take the words of a former General Electric's GE employee to define strategy William E. Rothschild said: "What do you want to achieve or avoid? The answers to this question are objectives. How will you go about achieving your desired results? The answer to this you can call strategy." This statement not only highlights the need for strategy but also the need to bring strategy to fruition. Companies should not only devise strategy but also successfully clarify and execute their strategies. This means that a company has to be able to measure its strategic success. Unfortunately, company strategy is not always transparent or understood in the same way by a company's key players. Sun Tzu, a Chinese military strategist who wrote the military treatise The Art of War, praised this aspect for strategies in war as follows: "All men can see these tactics whereby I conquer, but what none can see is the strategy out of which victory is evolved." The Strategy Map created by Kaplan and Norton is to facilitate corporate strategy development and execution, providing a missing link between strategy formulation and strategy implementation by identifying the key internal processes that drive strategic success and by aligning investment in people, technology, and organizational capital for the greatest impact. The first part of the assignment describes in detail the theoretical framework of Strategy Maps. The second part uses the theory to describe and visualize the Strategy Map of General Electric Medical Systems (GEMS), the world's leading manufacturer of diagnostic imaging equipment. This practical approach is based on the publication of Tarun Khanna about GEMS in the Harvard Business School Press in February 2003. In conclusion, there is a brief up-to-date situation on GEMS after 2002 and some statements to the author's experience in creating the GEMS Strategy Map.
