My Year of Living Mindfully Shannon Harvey, 2020-09-08 Overwhelmed with insomnia and an incurable autoimmune disease Shannon Harvey needed to make a change But while the award winning health journalist found plenty of recommendations on diet sleep and exercise when she looked for the equivalent of a 30 minute workout for her mental wellbeing there was nothing Also worried for the future mental health of her kids who were growing up amidst critical levels of stress anxiety depression and addiction Shannon enlisted a team of scientists to put meditation to the test Could learning to quiet our busy minds be the simple solution the world so desperately needs During her year of living mindfully Shannon is poked prodded scanned and screened After a 30 000 kilometre journey from Australia to the bright lights of Manhattan and the dusty refugee camps of the Middle East interviewing the world s leading mindfulness experts along the way what begins as a quest for answers transforms into a life changing experience From the director of the internationally acclaimed documentary of the same name My Year of Living Mindfully is filled with compelling stories groundbreaking science and unexpected insights that go to the heart of what it means to be human in the twenty first century Cities and Caliphs Nezar AlSayyad, 1991-05-30 The history of the Islamic world includes many unique cultural religious scientific and architectural developments Among these was the evolution of the Arab Muslim city which occurred during the rapid expansion of the Muslim empire in the seventh and eighth centuries A D In this probing volume Nezar AlSayyad examines the extraordinary characteristics of Islamic urbanism and the process by which cities and towns were absorbed and physically transformed by Islam The early leaders of the Muslim empire caliphs amirs and other rulers had a lasting effect on what the modern scholar would call their cities urban form AlSayyad demonstrates that the stereotypical model of the Muslim city is inadequate not only because individual rulers in regions of the empire were different but also due to various cultural influences that were indigenous to conquered areas After a prologue the study begins with a historiography of the concept of the Muslim city and how it was paralleled by the development of its physical form Garrison towns established as military camps by early Arab conquerors are examined next by AlSayyad His research shows that building methods and urban form in the Arab cities were products of Islamization and consolidation of Caliphal power New capital towns and cities AlSayyad maintains were also results of elaborate personal expressions of politico religious authority by certain Muslim rulers The book ends by suggesting that the Arabs and their leaders changing view of the role of architecture was a major factor behind the fluid urban forms of Muslim cities This significant contribution to the study of the Arab world and its cultural history will be of great value to Middle East urban and architectural historians anthropologists and archaeologists as well as to students of Islamic history and urbanism
