Lodge, John Hattie, 2016-07-22 Over recent years the field of Science of Learning has increased dramatically. Unfortunately despite claims that this work will greatly impact education very little research makes it into teacher practice. Although the reasons for this are varied a primary concern is the lack of a proper translation framework. From the Laboratory to the Classroom aims to consolidate information from many different research disciplines and correlate learning principles with known classroom practices in order to establish explanatory foundations for successful strategies that can be implemented into the classroom. It combines theoretical research with the diverse and dynamic classroom environment to deliver original effective and specific teaching and learning strategies and address questions concerning what possible mechanisms are at play as people learn. Divided into five sections chapters cover A Framework for Organizing and Translating Science of Learning Research Motivation and Attention as Foundations for Student Learning Memory and Metamemory Considerations in the Instruction of Human Beings Science of Learning in Digital Learning Environments Educational Approaches for Students Experiencing Learning Difficulties and Developmental Characteristics of Gifted Children Brain Behaviour and Classroom Practice Forging Research Practice Relationships via Laboratory Schools. This fascinating text gathers an international team of expert scientists teachers and administrators to present a coherent framework for the vital translation of laboratory research for educational practice. Applying the Science of Learning framework to a number of different educational domains it will be an essential guide for any student or researcher in education educational psychology neuropsychology educational technology and the emergent field of neuroeducation 5

Charles, James D. Slotta, Nathaniel Lasry, 2019-07-11 This book represents the emerging efforts of a growing international network of researchers and practitioners to promote the development and uptake of evidence based pedagogies in higher education at something a level approaching large scale impact. By offering a communication venue that attracts and enhances much needed partnerships among practitioners and researchers in pedagogical innovation we aim to change the conversation and focus on how we work and learn together i.e. extending the implementation and knowledge of co design methods. In this first edition of our Research Topic on Active Learning we highlight two of the three types of publications we wish to promote First are studies aimed at understanding the pedagogical designs developed by practitioners in their own practices by bringing to bear the theoretical lenses developed and tested in the education research community These types of studies constitute the practice pull that we see as a necessary counterbalance to knowledge push in a more productive pedagogical innovation ecosystem based on research practitioner partnerships Second are studies empirically examining the implementations of evidence based designs in naturalistic settings and under naturalistic conditions Interestingly the teams conducting these studies are already exemplars of partnerships between researchers and practitioners who are uniquely positioned as in between straddling the two worlds As a result these publications represent both the rigours of research and the pragmatism of reflective practice In forthcoming editions we will add to this collection a third type of publication design profiles These will present practitioner developed pedagogical designs at varying levels of abstraction to be held to scrutiny amongst practitioners instructional designers and researchers alike We hope by bringing these types of studies together in an open access format that we may contribute to the development of new forms of practitioner researcher interactions that promote co design in pedagogical innovation

Basic and applied research on deception and its detection Wolfgang Ambach, Matthias Gamer, 2014-08-07 Deception is a ubiquitous phenomenon in social interactions and has attracted a significant amount of research during the last decades The majority of studies in this field focused on how deception modulates behavioral autonomic and brain responses and whether these changes can be used to validly identify lies Especially the latter question which historically gave rise to the development of psychophysiological lie detection techniques has been driving research on deception and its detection until today The detection of deception and concealed information in forensic examinations currently constitutes one of the most frequent applications of psychophysiological methods in the field With the increasing use of such methods the techniques for detecting deception have been controversially discussed in the scientific community It has been proposed to shift from the original idea of detecting deception per se to a more indirect approach that allows for determining whether a suspect has specific knowledge of crime related details This so called Concealed Information Test is strongly linked to basic psychological concepts concerning memory attention orienting and response monitoring Although research in this field has intensified with the advancement of neuroimaging techniques such as PET and fMRI in the last decade basic questions on the psychological mechanisms underlying modulatory effects of deception and information concealment on behavioral autonomic and brain responses are still poorly understood This Research Topic brings together contributions from researchers in experimental psychology psychophysiology and neuroscience focusing on the understanding of the broad concept of deception including the detection of concealed information with respect to basic research questions as well as applied issues This Research Topic is mainly composed of original research articles but reviews and papers elaborating on novel methodological approaches have also been included Experimental methods include but are not limited to behavioral autonomic electroencephalographic or brain imaging techniques that allow for revealing relevant facets of deception on a multimodal level While this Research Topic primarily includes laboratory work relevant issues for the field use of such methods are also discussed **New Directions in Assessing Historical Thinking** Kadriye Ercikan, Peter Seixas, 2015-02-20 New technologies have radically transformed our relationship to information in general and to little bits of information in particular The assessment of history learning which for a century has valued those little bits as the centerpiece of its practice now faces not only an unprecedented glut but a disconnect with what is valued in history education More complex processes historical thinking historical consciousness or historical sense making demand more complex assessments At the same time advances in scholarship on assessment open up new possibilities For this volume Kadriye Ercikan and Peter Seixas have assembled an international array of experts who have collectively moved the fields of history education and assessment forward Their various approaches negotiate the sometimes conflicting demands of theoretical sophistication empirically demonstrated validity and practical efficiency Key issues include articulating the cognitive goals of history education the relationship between content and procedural knowledge the impact of students language literacy on history assessments and methods of validation in both large scale and classroom assessments New Directions in Assessing Historical Thinking is a critical research oriented resource that will advance the conceptualization design and validation of the next generation of history assessments **Mosby's**
