Operating Pressures

Minimum Operating Pressure Differential

The minimum operating pressure differential is that which is required to open the valve and to keep it open. Two way valves with floating piston or diaphragm will start to close below the minimum differential pressure. Three and four way pilot valves must maintain the minimum operating pressure throughout the operating cycle to ensure complete transfer from one position to the other.

Maximum Operating Pressure

Maximum operating pressure is the highest pressure at the inlet side of the valve, against which the operator can operate the valve. This pressure may be much less than the maximum safety rating of the valve body.

Note: Direct acting valves do not require a minimum pressure.
