

Activity 7.23: Role Reversals

Process Overview

This lesson involves students in a design and critique activity using different communication tools to share their engineering solutions. The emphasis of activities will vary based on grade level.

This activity requires students to engage in a process of identifying engineering design information and then use that information to support the design. This activity can be used to introduce engineering concepts.

For this activity, you will need a computer with a camera, a laptop, a projector, and a whiteboard or flipchart paper. You may also want to use a projector and a whiteboard or flipchart paper to support the presentation. This presentation can be used to introduce engineering concepts and to practice.

Objectives

- Students will share engineering solutions for a variety of engineering challenges.
- Students will evaluate and critique each other's engineering designs.
- Students will compare engineering designs to the needs of different people by identifying which engineering designs are better suited for their needs.
- Students will practice their engineering solutions and may support communication through drawings.
