In developing countries, contamination of food and water from cholera is a serious problem. Cholera is a disease caused by the bacterium Vibrio cholerae. Cholera causes severe diarrhea, which leads to the loss of large amounts of water per day. Cholera works by releasing a toxin that attaches to the lining of the digestive system. This causes the release of sodium and chlorine into the intestinal lumen (space inside intestines).

- Explain how the release of sodium and chlorine would lead to a loss of water in the intestines.
- In the intestinal cells there are sodium-glucose cotransporters. Knowing this, explain why doctors give patients recovering from cholera a sodium-glucose solution to drink.
