Act Practice Test 61c:

Family Communication about Genetics Clara L. Gaff, Carma L. Bylund, 2010 Genetics is in all senses a family affair The diagnosis of a genetic condition affects not only the patient and biological family members who may themselves be at risk but also family more generally as support may be sought from those considered kin and who may or may not be at risk themselves It is considered best practice in genetic consultations to explore who will be informed within the family when a genetic condition or risk is diagnosed particularly when the health of other family members is at risk There is little guidance or consensus on how to achieve the implicit goal of informed family members while respecting patient confidentiality however There is a need for practitioners to be aware of the dynamics of family communication and to have guidance about how they may sensitively facilitate communication about genetics within families This handbook facilitates the development of clinical practices relating to family communication about genetics Relevant theories of family communication are summarized and related to a clinical genetics milieu and from this frameworks for practitioners are presented A book of this nature is particularly timely as the completion of the Human Genome Project will result in an unprecedented amount of information about genetic constitution and health risks becoming available to individuals and their families The presence of a potentially genetic condition in a family is not a new phenomenon However the growth in testing for genetic conditions common complex conditions and variants that may influence health as well as drug metabolism means that a greater number of individuals will face decisions about communicating this information to their relatives Many health professionals in all levels of health care will be confronted with issues of responsibility and practice in family communication about genetic information as they become providers of this testing The New Zealand Law Reports, 1990 Vols for 1933 1936 include The Law journal supplement to the New Zealand law reports Allied Health Professionals and the Law Rosemary Kennedy, 2008 News this book has been included as one of the texts for the National Psychology Examination Curriculum Domains 1 Ethics and 4 Communication developed by the Psychology Board of Australia This book targets a wide range of allied health professions The list while not exhaustive embraces occupational therapy podiatry Chinese medicine complementary medicine nuclear medicine speech pathology radiography physiotherapy psychology osteopathy chiropractic care and optometry The authors explain the legal context in which these professions function the various forms of legal regulation which apply to them their legal liabilities and legal imperatives which bear upon their practice Also included is commentary on the limits and ambiguities of law in relation to allied health activity the interaction between law and professional ethics and some significant legal challenges in normal professional life Allied Health Professionals and the Law expands the legal knowledge of allied health readers whether they are practitioners seeking to understand the legal aspects of their work or researchers engaged in analysis of professional matters which have legal dimensions and implications
