

Transition Guide

Transition can be a time of fear for young people. Ensuring that young people have a positive transition can be a significant challenge and one that should be a priority for all schools. A successful transition ensures young people are happy, engaged and ready to learn. It reduces the number of behavioural and attendance issues which can be problematic for both the young person and the school.

Here are some suggestions to create a positive transition experience for all young children.

- Create a memory booklet of the young person's experiences in their old setting, in which transition activities can be added. This can be used by the children's practitioners, or can be used as a comfort and keepsake for the child at home.
- Young people will be excited by school but it is also terrifying for many people as they will be in a new place with new people. Ask the children to bring a small object from their old setting, such as a teddy bear, a toy, or a small object from their old setting, to help them feel more comfortable in their new setting.
- Encourage transition visits from previous schools to the children's old settings. Children can then feel more comfortable in their new setting.

There are a number of ways to support a positive transition. It is important to ensure young people are happy and ready to learn. It is also important to ensure young people are happy and ready to learn.

Transition Guide

Transition of any kind can be difficult for young people. Ensuring that young people have a positive transition both through school and to different schools is key. A successful transition ensures young people are happy, engaged and ready to learn. It reduces the number of behavioural and attendance issues which can be problematic for both the young person and the school.

Here are some suggestions to create a positive transition experience for all young children.

- Create a memory booklet of the young person's experiences in their old setting or school. This memory booklet can be taken with them and used by the children's practitioners, or can be used as a comfort and keepsake for the child at home.
- Create a fun and interesting treasure hunt around the building so young people are able to find where all classrooms are located. Ask the children to find key locations such as the main office, dining hall, library, etc. and discuss strategies for getting lost and help any anxieties the children may have.
- Encourage transition visits from previous schools to the children's old settings. Children can learn from their peers about the transition process.
- Ask key staff to come and spend time getting to know the children at their old settings. The young people will then have a familiar face to go to when
