Roadway Lighting Ian Lewin, 2003 Nighttime visibility has been shown to be influenced by the lamp type used for roadway lighting because the lamp's spectral output can influence sensors in the retina that are active at night This report investigates the nature of these spectral effects and provides an in depth review of available knowledge It also addresses lighting levels and their relationship to driver safety Three candidate lamp types have been analyzed in terms of technical characteristics and associated costs This involves factors such as the efficacy with which the sources produce light lamp life and maintenance characteristics Ideal lighting designs have been performed using the three sources for identical road sections and initial and operating costs have been calculated to assist in contrasting the difference between the sources
