Abstract

[illegible]

The diagram illustrates five different touchscreen technologies arranged in a circular pattern around a central point. Each technology is represented by an image of the device and a brief description of its operation.

- Capacitive touchscreen: Detects the change in capacitance when a conductive object (like a finger) touches the screen.
- Resistive touchscreen: Consists of two layers of conductive material. When pressed together, they create a circuit that identifies the touch location.
- Infrared touchscreen: Uses a grid of infrared light beams. A touch is detected when a finger or object breaks one of the beams.
- Acoustic touchscreen: Uses sound waves to detect touch. A finger touching the screen creates a small sound that is picked up by sensors.
- Surface Acoustic Wave (SAW) touchscreen: Uses high-frequency sound waves that travel across the surface of the screen. A touch is detected when the waves are interrupted by a finger.
