

FEMALE AUDITION MONOLOGUE (Memorization is expected.)

Excerpt from Almost, Maine by John Cariani

STORY OF HOPE

Scene: Lights up on a woman (Hope) standing on the front porch of a small home in Almost, Maine. She carries a suitcase and a purse. She knocks on the door of the home; a short, thin man answers it. She is so absorbed by what she has to say and by what she has come to do, that she really doesn't take in/look at the man.)

Hope:

I know this isn't going to be very easy, but I was just out there all alone in the world, and I got so scared, because all I could think about was how I had no place in this world, but then I just outta nowhere realized that there was one place in this world that I did have, and that was with you, so I flew and I took a taxi to get to you, I just had to come see you. (Finally really looking at him.) Thank God you're – ... (The man is not who she thought he'd be.) Oh – ... Wait – ... I'm sorry. You're not – ... I'm – ... I'm so sorry – ... Does Daniel Harding live here? I'm looking for Daniel Harding. He lives here. I thought. But ... Ooooh ... he doesn't, does he? Ooooh. I am so sorry. (The woman gathers her bags, preparing to leave.) I'm so embarrassed. "Who is this woman and what is she doing here?" (Beat.) I just honestly thought he'd be here. I always thought he'd be here. Always. (Beat.) Do you know him? Big guy, big tall guy. Played basketball, all-Eastern Maine, center? Strong. Do you know him? Played hockey, too? Oh, don't even answer that. That was –. I know that's a horrible question to ask a person who lives in a small town, as if everybody in small towns knows everybody else, agh!, can't believe I asked that. I don't live here anymore, but when I did, I hated it when people assumed I knew everybody in town just because it was small. It was worse than when they'd ask if we had " ... plumbing way up there?" ' cause, you know, people in small towns really don't know each other any better than in big towns, you know that? I mean, you know who you know, and you don't know who you don't know, just like anywhere else. (Beat.) I'm so sorry to have bothered you.
