

Chapter 5: Biological Diversity and Conservation

Biodiversity

- The variety of species in a specific area
- Measured by the number of different species that live in a certain area

Why is biodiversity important?

- Living things depend on other living things
  - Animals depend on plants and plants depend on animals to live
- Different populations of organisms have adapted to living together
  - Predators and prey; organisms involved in symbiosis
- Brings stability to an ecosystem
  - Since one species of plant is spread out between other types of plants and animals, it is difficult to wipe out that species completely
- Humans depend on other organisms for their needs
  - Plants provide oxygen, animals and plants provide food
  - Plants provide raw materials for clothes and buildings
  - Plants, fungi and bacteria provide medications

Biodiversity Monitoring and Conservation

Ben Collen,Nathalie Pettorelli,Jonathan E. M. Baillie,Sarah M. Durant,2013-05-06 As the impacts of anthropogenic activities increase in both magnitude and extent biodiversity is coming under increasing pressure Scientists and policy makers are frequently hampered by a lack of information on biological systems particularly information relating to long term trends Such information is crucial to developing an understanding as to how biodiversity may respond to global environmental change Knowledge gaps make it very difficult to develop effective policies and legislation to reduce and reverse biodiversity loss This book explores the gap between global commitments to biodiversity conservation and local action to track biodiversity change and implement conservation action High profile international political commitments to improve biodiversity conservation such as the targets set by the Convention on Biological Diversity require innovative and rapid responses from both science and policy This multi disciplinary perspective highlights barriers to conservation and offers novel solutions to evaluating trends in biodiversity at multiple scales and analysis in order to illustrate the complexities involved in the human ecosystems interface part II deals with the valuation of ecosystems with special emphasis on the main biomes faults wetlands marine systems grasslands and agriculture part III covers the problem of value appropriation and the relevant constraints and available policy instruments the final section focuses on the difficult ethical issues that surround utilization and conservation of biodiversity

Biodiversity and

Conservation Michael J. Jeffries,2006-07-13 This revised second edition provides an introductory guide through the maze of interdisciplinary themes that comprise biodiversity. It combines biological sciences with insights into the origins, variety and distribution of biodiversity, analysis of the social and political context and the threats to and opportunities for the survival of natural systems. Whilst retaining its existing structure, this updated new edition reflects advances that have demonstrated the importance of living systems as drivers of environmental services vital to human health and security. The final chapter has been revised to tackle more explicitly the contrasting approaches to conservation and throughout the book has been updated to reflect new research and developments. With highly original international case studies and ample illustrations to explain difficult topics clearly, this excellent book remains the only introductory text which brings together the full range of theory and practice of biodiversity and conservation.

Implementing the Convention on Biological Diversity in the Philippines, 1998    Protecting Biological Diversity David William Pearce, Seema Puroshothaman, 1992    Essentials of Conservation Biology Richard B. Primack, 1993 A unified introduction to the multidisciplinary science of conservation biology. Combines theory with applied and basic research to explain the connections between conservation biology and environmental economics, ethics, law and the social sciences. Text is appropriate for undergraduate biology students and students of related disciplines. Challenges and solutions in mineral industry Carsten Drebendest, 2009    Encyclopedia of World Problems and Human Potential: Actions, strategies, solutions, 1994    Biodiversity and Conservation Richard J. Ladle, 2009

Although biodiversity is a relatively new coinage, scientists have been studying the subject it describes long before the word's first appearance in the language in the mid 1980s. In 1973, for instance, the UK Systematics Association held a symposium on The Changing Flora and Fauna of Britain which concluded that not enough attention was being paid to the conservation of rarities; a conclusion also reached said the symposium at a meeting of the Linnaean Society some forty years earlier. By 1980 the Global 2000 Report to the President published by the US Council on Environmental Quality starkly warned of a diminution of up to one fifth of all species by the turn of the century and there is now a growing consensus that the world faces a biodiversity crisis, a potentially catastrophic global loss of genetic, ecosystem and most obviously, species diversity. Indeed, especially since the UN Convention on Biological Diversity was promulgated in Rio de Janeiro in 1992, conserving biodiversity has become the principal focus of the global conservation movement. Indeed, the study of the origins, maintenance and protection of diversity has become perhaps the most vibrant offshoot of ecology and conservation studies. It is increasingly taught and studied in universities and other research institutions around the world. Addressing the need for an authoritative reference work to make sense of this rapidly growing subject and its ever more complex and multidisciplinary corpus of scholarly literature, Biodiversity and Conservation is a new title in the Routledge series Critical Concepts in the Environment. Edited by Richard Ladle of Oxford University's Centre for the Environment, this new Major Work brings together in five volumes the foundational and the very best cutting edge scholarship to provide a synoptic view of all the key issues and current debates The first volume in the collection History Background and Concepts brings together the most important scholarship covering all the major themes that have come to define the scope of the subject For example what is biodiversity and how is it measured Also what are the geographic and temporal patterns of biodiversity And what are its values Volumes II and III meanwhile collect the vital research on topics such as population growth and development habitat loss and fragmentation pollution invasive species terrestrial freshwater and marine biomes and climate change The scope of the materials in Volume IV Responses to Biodiversity Loss includes international legal frameworks for conservation biodiversity protected areas and networks conservation planning restoration and rewilding reintroductions and translocations and ex situ conservation via for instance zoos seed and gene banks conservation education and community conservation The scholarship assembled in the final volume Future Directions in Biodiversity Conservation collects the best and most influential work on themes such as paleo ecology or how to use the past to understand the future the emergence of conservation biogeography conservation outside protected areas or reconciliation ecology and the effects of the revolution in IT Also gathered here is the finest research on the idea of a converging agenda around sustainable development poverty and biodiversity as well as the crucial work on economics and market led conservation Biodiversity and Conservation is fully indexed and includes a comprehensive introduction newly written by the editor which places the collected material in its historical and intellectual context The collection's fresh and explicitly interdisciplinary approach provides a unique insight into the development of the subject from a predominantly science based topic to a vibrant interdisciplinary concern with an increasing appreciation of the social obligations of conservation Biodiversity and Conservation is an essential reference collection and is destined to be valued by scholars and students as well as conservation policy makers and practitioners as a vital one stop research and pedagogic resource
