Five Pig Houses

THE STORY

Farmer Brown gave his five pigs named Spamsen, Delicia, Ribert, Bacann and McSwine various building materials and told them to build five houses in a row. The pigs all used different building materials; they used brick, glass, wood, straw and mud. They painted their houses different colors; they painted them blue, pink, purple, white and green. And in the true English fashion, the pigs gave their houses different names. They named them Pig Acres, Portlando, McSwine, Pigking and New Park. Based on the clues, match the five houses with the pigs that built them, their building materials, the color of paint they used and the names of their houses.

The clues

1. New Park was built by Delicia.
2. The pink house was built out of straw and mud.
3. Pig Acres was painted purple by Bacann.
4. Spamsen's second house was painted green.
5. The blue house was not green or white.
6. The 1st house was not green or white.
7. The 2nd house was not built out of wood or purple.
8. The 3rd house was not built out of straw or mud.
9. The 4th house was not built out of wood or straw.
10. The 5th house was not built out of wood or straw.
11. Delicia did not build any of the first three houses.
12. The 3rd house was not built out of brick or purple.

7 Mindware Answers:

Rationality in Context Steven Bland, 2023-12-01 This book uses the psychological literature on rationality to weigh in on the recent debate between virtue epistemologists and epistemic situationists. It argues that both sides have misconstrued the literature and that an interactionist framework is needed to square epistemic theory with empirical facts about reasoning and inference. The explosion of empirical literature on human rationality has led to seismic shifts across a multitude of academic disciplines. This book considers its implications for epistemology. In particular, it critically evaluates the treatment of the rationality literature within the recent controversy between virtue epistemologists who attempt to ground knowledge in stable epistemic virtues and epistemic situationists who claim that such a project is doomed by empirical evidence of widespread irrationality. It links this foundational controversy to two of the most important debates in psychology: the Rationality Wars and the person-situation debate. The book argues that both virtue theorists and epistemic situationists have misunderstood the implications of these debates, leading them to focus exclusively on personal dispositions and situational factors as two independent sources of epistemic success, failure, and improvement. A more accurate reading of the empirical literature implies that interactions between epistemic agents and their social, informational, and institutional environments are the fundamental drivers of both rational and irrational behaviour. An interactionist framework motivated by this insight conceives of epistemic virtues and vices as both responsive to and responsible for the environments in which they are manifested and cultivated. The central aim of this book is to present and defend this novel type of virtue epistemology. Rationality in Context will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in epistemology, philosophy of science, philosophy of psychology, cognitive psychology, and social psychology. Thinking and Reasoning Ken Manktelow, 2012-02-13 The area of psychological research reviewed in this book is one that is not only increasing in popularity in college curricula but is also making an ever larger impact on the world outside the classroom. Drawing upon research originally cited in Ken Manktelow's highly successful publication Reasoning and Thinking, this completely rewritten textbook reflects on the revolutionary changes that have occurred in the field in recent years, stemming from the huge expansion in research output as well as new methods and explanations and the appearance of numerous books on the subject aimed at the popular market. The main areas covered are probability judgment, deductive and inductive reasoning, decision making, hypothetical thinking, and rationality. In each case, the material is almost entirely new, with topics such as the new paradigm in reasoning research, causal reasoning, and counterfactual thinking appearing for the first time. The book also presents an extended treatment of decision making research and contains a chapter on individual and cultural influences on thinking. Thinking and Reasoning provides a detailed, integrated, and approachable treatment of this area of cognitive psychology and is ideal reading for intermediate and advanced undergraduate students, indeed for anyone interested in how we draw conclusions and make choices. Mindware Bind-Up/Great Book of Whodunit Puzzles
