- iv. Government business agencies are very different from agencies:
 - a. It has more day-to-day and routine, short-term financial responsibilities than does a non-commercial agency.
 - b. It has a greater role in making existing economic regulations more efficient.
 - c. It has a greater emphasis on a group of experts than on individual experts for producing specific programs.
- v. Non-commercial government agencies are more similar to government business agencies than to government non-commercial agencies.
 - a. They have a more limited set of political functions in maintaining order, peace and law or providing basic public regulation services.
 - b. Unlike other government agencies they may not be required to prove efficiency before the public sector.
 - c. It is important for the government agency to have a clear line of authority in making the economic regulations.
