

A.P. U.S. History Syllabus

Mr. Carrasco

Course Description

A.P. U.S. History is meant to be a college-level course taught in high school. In fact, it is harder than the average college history course since the textbook and all materials must be completed by late April (requiring a pace of 1½ chapters per week) and since it culminates with a rigorous, comprehensive, nationally administered exam. Most of the responsibility to pass the A.P. exam lies with the individual student. Only bright, motivated, disciplined students who enjoy history can expect to succeed in this course and on the exam. Students accustomed to getting A's for simply showing up and doing all their homework may be in for a rude awakening. While good attendance and completing homework are essential to success, they are not enough. Content must be mastered and learning demonstrated on exams and essays. This will require a level of hard work and study that is foreign to many students. Most students struggle the first semester, particularly the first six weeks, as they attempt to adapt to college-level work. However, students who persevere usually learn a great deal about U.S. history and the skills they will need to succeed in college. On the other hand, those taking this course for the wrong reasons (parental or peer pressure or to boost their G.P.A.) are likely to struggle and be disappointed with their choice. Those students involved in extracurricular activities, other A.P. classes, or who are employed should carefully weigh the demands of this course against their other commitments.

The A.P. U.S. History Exam

The Advanced Placement (A.P.) program is an opportunity for students to earn college credit while still in high school. To do so a student must take and pass the A.P. U.S. History exam. This nationally administered exam is 3 hours and 5 minutes in length. Half of the exam is a 55 minute, 80 question multiple choice section. One-sixth of the multiple choice questions are drawn from the years up to 1789, one-half of the multiple choice questions cover the years 1790-1914, and the remaining one-third of the multiple choice questions are taken from the 1915 and beyond.

The other half of the exam is a 130 minute essay section. The first essay is a document based question (DBQ) and requires students to incorporate both their knowledge of the time period and their skill in analyzing primary source documents. All students are required to answer this question. The remaining four essay questions are free response questions (FRQs) divided into two sets: one set is from the first half of American history while the other set is drawn from the second half of American history. Students are to respond to one essay from each set. The College Board suggests students typically spend 60 total minutes on the DBQ (15 minutes preparing and 45 minutes writing it) and 35 minutes on each FRQ (5 minutes preparing and 30 minutes writing).

The A.P. U.S. History exam is graded on a five point scale. Generally, most public universities award credit to students who earn a 3 or higher while many private colleges require a score of 4 or higher. However, since each school is free to set its own policy, students are advised to check the policies of institutions they are interested in attending.

All students enrolled in this class second semester are required to take the A.P. U.S. History exam. The A.P. U.S. History exam is administered each year in early May. The approximate cost of each A.P. exam is $80. Any student who chooses not to take the A.P. U.S. History exam will be required to take a similar exam on the same day that will comprise 20% of that student's second semester grade.
