

Acute catarrhal laryngitis.

Acute inflammation of the laryngeal mucosa is usually extension of catarrhal inflammation of nasal and pharyngeal mucosa, e.g. In OPBI, influenza.

Symptoms. The disease is characterized by hoarse voice, tickling and dryness in the throat. The body temperature is usually normal and less frequently it rises to subfebrile.

Simultaneously with the subjective signs, develops also dry cough, which later turns into wet cough. Voice production disturbances are characterized by various degrees of dysphonia to complete aphonia. Respiration is sometimes difficult because of accumulation of mucopurulent crusts and swelling of the mucosa.

Upper Respiratory Infections and Environmental Conditions in a U.S. Navy Shipboard Population Edward D. Gorham, 1997 Two mechanisms of upper respiratory infection URI transmission have been described 1 direct or fomite contact with self inoculation and 2 transmission via aerosolized droplet nuclei This study was undertaken to evaluate the relative contributions of these mechanisms in two populations living aboard Navy ships A cross sectional survey of URI symptoms was performed among 1 990 people living aboard 34 ships Subjects completed questionnaires ascertaining symptoms during the previous 30 days and occupational and environmental conditions including the number of occupants sharing sleeping compartments A separate study was performed of 1 777 people who slept in 47 compartments aboard an aircraft carrier This study used medical department diagnoses of URI and carbon dioxide measurements in sleeping compartments to assess ventilation The 30 day period prevalence of URI symptoms aboard the 34 ships was 52% among men and 64% among women The rate in current smokers was 18% higher than in never smokers Individuals reporting dust exposure had 23% higher rates than those not exposed Crew in the highest sleeping occupancy quartile 80 persons had 31% higher rates than those in the lowest quartile 1 24 persons This association persisted after adjustment for gender age race type of ship and occupational exposures The mean carbon dioxide concentration in sleeping compartments aboard the aircraft carrier was 1 072 ppm Incidence rates were not associated with population density or carbon dioxide level in sleeping compartments URI incidence was 70% higher in compartments with high relative humidity Results of the 34 ship study support previous research indicating the role of high sleeping space occupancy in URI spread The aircraft carrier study did not support an association between URI incidence and high carbon dioxide concentration as a marker of poor ventilation and was not supportive of aerosolized droplet nuclei as a primary transmission mechanism in this setting The association with high relative humidity is consistent with research demonstrating longer duration of virus survival in humid environments and supportive of fomite transmission with self inoculation The occurrence of epidemics following two port visits supports an epidemic model of URI transmission from port populations to susceptible individuals aboard ship Physician ICD-9-CM American Medical Association, 2005 2004 ICD-9-CM Professional for Physicians, Volumes 1 and 2 Ingenix, 2003 These practical two volume ICD 9 CM Professional codebooks were designed with the coder in mind Enhanced with crucial reimbursement indicators these codebooks are your guides to coding accurately The clinically oriented definitions and illustrations exclusive color coded tabular check fourth and fifth digit symbols and official coding guidelines are some of the hallmarks of these Professional editions of the ICD 9 CM code book Plus the latest revisions to the complete official coding guidelines are included 2014 ICD-9-CM for Hospitals, Volumes 1, 2 and 3 Standard Edition - E-Book Carol J.
