

Adjective Clauses in English

Essential and non-essential adjective clauses

● An essential adjective clause is a clause that is necessary for the sentence to make sense.

Example:
"The woman who is wearing a red dress is my mother."

● A non-essential adjective clause is a clause that is not necessary for the sentence to make sense.

Example: "The house, which is located on the corner of the street, is for sale."

Adjective clause examples sentences

"The book which is on the table is mine."

In this sentence, the clause "which is on the table" is an adjective clause because it adds more information about the noun "book."

"The people who live in the house are my neighbors."

The clause "who live in the house" is an adjective clause because it adds more information about the noun "people."

"The car that I bought last year is very reliable."

The clause "that I bought last year" is an adjective clause because it adds more information about the noun "car."

"The book which my friend recommended, that one on the table, is mine."

There are two adjective clauses here that both modify the noun "book."
