Cells and Proteins

Proteins:

The Proteome:

The proteome is the entire set of proteins expressed by a genome. It's larger than the genome because more than 1 protein can be made from a single gene through Alternative RNA Splicing.

Not all genes are expressed as proteins; some genes don't code for proteins, the non-coding RNA genes. Instead, they might be transcribed to produce tRNA and rRNA.

The set of proteins expressed by a given cell type can vary over time and under different conditions. Some factors affecting the set of proteins expressed by a given cell type are the metabolic activity of the cell, its cellular structure, the response to signalling molecules, and diseased versus healthy cells.

The Synthesis and Transport of Proteins:

Intracellular membranes:

The cytosol is the fluid found inside the cell where metabolic reactions take place, and organelles/other molecules can be found.

In eukaryotic cells, they have internal membranes which increase the surface area for reactions to occur.

The endoplasmic reticulum (ER) is a network of tube-like membranes around the nucleus.

There are 2 types:

- Rough ER (RER) - has ribosomes attached on its cytosolic face.
- Smooth ER (SER) - does not have ribosomes on its surface.

Education Students Tony Cook,Brian S. Rushton,2009-09-10 How to Recruit and Retain Higher Education Students is an invaluable resource for academic staff administrators and policy makers involved in student recruitment and improving student retention It offers practical advice on how universities can influence the expectations of prospective students allowing them to make sensible decisions about careers courses and institutions Many surveys of students who drop out of university show that most do so out of disappointment Failing to understand what higher education was about quickly enough they become confused and frustrated Dropping out seems the best solution This book describes a series of practices proven to encourage students to stay on discussing the background research on student attrition By preparing students better for their higher education experience the practices in this book are effective not only in recruiting students but also in matching them to the right institutions and programmes The practices described range from those reaching out in a broad way to communities of potential students to university support for pre entry examinations to enhanced communication between institutions and applicants All are described in sufficient detail to allow judgments to be made about how to use and adapt them to suit local needs How to Recruit and Retain Higher Education Students provides a sound theoretical foundation for research into student retention and provides the necessary underpinning for those academic staff embarking on courses and assists in preparing them for their roles in both teaching and student support Queen's Medical Magazine ,1962
