

4 tips for going & staying pro

Steps to build & sustain a career as a media maker.
Photographers who combine multiple methods of supporting their projects, have a better chance to make a lifelong career.

1 PITCHING STORIES

Don't wait for your phone to ring. It is important to create your own body of work. Shoot the majority or all of your first project before pitching. Once you have a strong narrative and images for your project, it's time to pitch media outlets which align with the subject matter & style of your project.

2 ASSIGNMENTS

Can either be the result of a pitch or a cold call.
Timely professional communication, good relations and trust are key to getting continued assignments.
Assignments have deadlines, so time management in shooting & delivering the finished work is key.

3 LICENSING YOUR ARCHIVE

After you have completed many stories, reselling these helps greatly to create a more stable livelihood & passive income. Usually an agency does this and shares the profits, leaving you free to focus on making new works. There are many different kinds of agencies, research & choose well.

4 GRANTS

Grants are a great way to create projects that can not be supported by the market. Fortunately there are 100's of organizations that grant photographers., so it is always worth looking into current offers.
