

United States Government

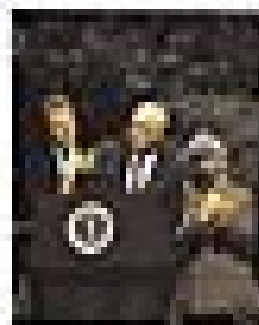

Structure of the Government

The United States is a federal republic. This means that the government is made up of many different parts, each with its own responsibilities. The three main branches of the government are the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches. Each branch has a specific role to play in the running of the country.

The Executive branch is headed by the President. The President is responsible for enforcing the laws of the country. The Legislative branch is made up of Congress, which is responsible for making laws. The Judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court and is responsible for interpreting the laws.

Each branch has its own set of powers and responsibilities. The Executive branch has the power to appoint and remove federal judges. The Legislative branch has the power to pass laws. The Judicial branch has the power to declare laws unconstitutional.

President Obama and Vice President Biden

Major Governmental Branches

The Executive branch is the branch of the federal government that is responsible for enforcing the laws. It is headed by the President, who is elected by the people. The President has the power to appoint and remove federal judges, and to declare laws unconstitutional.

Legislative Branch

The Legislative branch is the branch of the federal government that is responsible for making laws. It is made up of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House of Representatives is elected by the people, and the Senate is elected by the states.

The Judicial branch is the branch of the federal government that is responsible for interpreting the laws. It is headed by the Supreme Court, which is made up of nine justices. The Supreme Court has the power to declare laws unconstitutional.
