1. The first step in the process of the cell cycle is the G₁ phase. During this phase, the cell grows and prepares for DNA replication. The G₁ phase is the longest phase of the cell cycle and is followed by the S phase, where DNA replication occurs. The S phase is followed by the G₂ phase, where the cell continues to grow and prepares for mitosis. The G₂ phase is followed by the M phase, where the cell divides into two daughter cells. The M phase is the shortest phase of the cell cycle and is followed by the G₁ phase, completing the cycle.

2. The cell cycle is a highly regulated process that ensures the accurate replication and division of cells. The regulation of the cell cycle is controlled by a complex network of proteins and signaling pathways. The most important regulators of the cell cycle are the cyclins and cyclin-dependent kinases (CDKs). Cyclins are proteins that are synthesized and degraded in a rhythmic pattern, and their levels determine the activity of CDKs. CDKs are enzymes that phosphorylate other proteins, which in turn regulate the progression of the cell cycle. The cell cycle is also regulated by external factors, such as growth factors and nutrients, which can either promote or inhibit the progression of the cycle. The cell cycle is a fundamental process that is essential for the growth and development of all organisms.
