are too great, a portion of the cam-cam is not in use. This condition causes valves to open and close with terrific impact, causing abnormal stress on the valve train, and greatly increased the possibility of valve breakage, particularly at high engine speeds. This also reduces the efficiency of your engine because the valves are not open long enough to get sufficient fuel into the combustion chamber or to exhaust all of the burned gases.

On a new trailer, correct clearances are established before the engine leaves the factory. So that you may obtain the maximum performance the engine was designed for, we recommend having valve tappet clearance checked at least every 100 hours or whenever they become excessively noisy. Before attempting to set valve tappet clearance, run the engine until it reaches normal operating temperature. After normal temperature is reached, stop the engine, shut off the fuel supply at the fuel bowl, and remove the glass bowl before removing the rocker shell cover. When making tappet adjustments, all you have to do is follow the Tappet Adjustment Chart and make certain the location of the valve being checked coincides with the Valve Arrangement Chart.
