Background

Cardiac Conduction

The heart has its own system in place to create nerve impulses and does not actually require the brain to make it beat. This electrical system is called the cardiac conduction system. It is made up of specialized tissues and cells embedded in the heart that send impulses directly to the atria and ventricles, causing them to contract. In the normal cardiac cycle, the left and right atria contract together first followed by the contraction of the ventricles together.

The cardiac conduction system is complex, but there are three crucial parts:

- The Sinoatrial (SA) Node

Also known as the pacemaker; this is a small bundle of cells capable of starting the electrical impulse that will cause the heart to beat.

- The Atrioventricular (AV) Node

A small bundle of cells that can receive the electrical impulse from the SA node, and continue the electrical signal down into the ventricles.

- His-Purkinje System

These fibers actually carry the electrical impulse to the ventricles, causing a contraction. The impulse starts at the His bundle fibers, continues into the right bundle branch and left bundle branch, and ends in Purkinje fibers spread throughout the ventricles.

The Heartbeat

The sinoatrial (SA) node begins the contraction by sending an impulse through both atria, causing them to contract and reach the atrioventricular (AV) node. The AV node continues the impulse, sending it down the Bundle of His, right and left bundle branches, and into Purkinje fibers within the ventricles causing both ventricles to contract.

As the impulse moves through the heart, cardiac muscle tissue contracts as the cells depolarize. Depolarization is caused by a flood of ions (sodium and potassium) across the cell membrane and drives the cells, and therefore cardiac muscle tissues, to contract. Once the impulse has passed, the cardiac cells must reset to be able to send another impulse. This is called repolarization and occurs when the ions move back through the cell membrane, causing the cardiac muscle tissue to relax.

The SA node will create anywhere from 60-100 electrical impulses per minute. Each of these impulses causes your heart to beat and translates to your heart rate. The electrical impulse causes the heart to depolarize and contract, followed by repolarization and relaxation, at a constant rate. The normal rhythm and rate is called the sinus rhythm. The cardiac conduction system is also capable of increasing or decreasing the number of electrical impulses depending on the amount of oxygen needed by the body. For example, when you run a mile your need for energy increases, causing the need for more oxygen, and resulting in an increase in the heartbeat and respiratory rate to bring more oxygen into the body.
