

Worksheet: Atmospheric Structure

COORDINATED SCIENCE 1

Background: Earth's atmosphere extends more than 1,000 kilometers above Earth's surface. Most of our weather takes place within the Troposphere, a layer extending 30 km above the Earth's surface. In this layer, temperature normally decreases with height. Sometimes, however, temperature increases with height. This is called temperature inversion. When this happens, the air is very stable - it resists the rising motion needed to form clouds or to disperse air pollution.

1. Label the diagram below, identifying each of the following: Troposphere, Stratosphere, Mesosphere, Thermosphere.

2. What are the stratopause and mesopause?

3. Describe what is happening to the temperature as you gain height in each of the four layers.

- Troposphere-
- Stratosphere-
- Mesosphere-
- Thermosphere-
