This, then, is the central problem that this and other officers face: how can they "do the right thing" and "use their resources" in a manner that is consistent with the values of the organization? The answer to this question is not simple, but it is the central theme of this book. The author, who is a senior officer in the U.S. Army, discusses the challenges of leadership in a complex, dynamic environment. He argues that the most effective leaders are those who are able to "do the right thing" and "use their resources" in a manner that is consistent with the values of the organization.
