

ATP

(How do cells capture, release and store energy?)

Why?

A sporting goods store might accept a $100 bill for the purchase of a bicycle, but the corner store will not take a $100 bill when you buy a package of gum. It is helpful to have smaller denominations in your wallet, to make everyday transactions easier.

The same concept is true for your cells. They need energy (their “currency”) to take care of their everyday functions, and they need currency in many denominations. The largest denominations are the molecules in the food we eat, the source of all of our energy. These molecules are large, and harvesting the energy they hold requires work on the part of the cell. For quick cellular transactions, your cells store energy in the small molecule of ATP. This is the equivalent of a $1 bill for your cells’ daily activities. As with money, this energy currency can be earned, spent or saved.

Model 1: The Structure of Adenosine Tri-Phosphate (ATP)

- List the three parts of the ATP molecule and label each on the simplified molecule below.
 - A: an adenyltic base, made up of carbon, hydrogen, and nitrogen atoms
 - B: a ribose sugar, made up of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen atoms
 - C: three phosphate groups, each made up of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen atoms, bound together
- Describe how you would be able to identify each part of the ATP molecule. Give yourself clues to identify each component.
 - You would be able to identify the ATP molecule by looking for the adenyltic base, the ribose sugar, and the three phosphate groups. For the adenyltic base, you would be looking for a dark line with three small dots above it, and for the ribose sugar, you would be looking for a shape similar to a “V” with a dot in the center. For the phosphate groups, you would be looking for a small circle with three lines underneath it.
